Meaning (From TK Govinda Rao's Book):

O Mother Kaamakshi! I place implicit faith at your pair of lotus feet. Please remove my miseries. Mother of the universe! Protect me. This is the right time to redeem the fallen one. Every day, I, your son seek refuge in you. Oh compassionate one! Whose feet are adored by Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva. Why this dispute with me? Your eyes are comparable to the lotus petals, you braid excels the dark cloud, your face resembles the radiance of the moon! O Honorable one! On hearing your great repute as the goddess, who grants the good fortune to all those whomeditate upon you, I surrendered to you. The beloved of Shiva! Purahara, the purifier, Paarvati! Mother of All! Destroy my affliction and grant me favor. You reside in the Kanakagiri, the golden mountain! The Vedas do verily proclaim that you shower prosperity on those who repose faith in you. Please do hear my prayers! Hear! Hear ! Hear! Oh one with feet like tender shoots! I can no longer endure this. Oh, one with the gait of an elephant, do not tarry, protect me this moment. Oh supreme one! Oh Goddess with teeth like Jasmine buds! Whose feet are venerated by a host of celestials, are you not the bestower of boons in this world? Do not my prayers reach your ears? Oh daughter of the mountains! Are you not the infinite benefactor of the world? I am convinced that your lotus-feet will guide me across the ocean of existence. Are Brahma, the celestials and sages capable of extolling your glory? Grant me good fortune. I place my trust in you. Sister of Shyamakrishna! Quickly Bestow on me your benign glance!
